Le rapport entre la spiritualité et la théologie est abordé.* The thesis was formulated with the mentorship of two eminent French professors, André Benoit and Gerard Ziegwald.

In 1987, he commenced his monastic vocation at Sihăstria Monastery in Neamţ County, assuming the name Daniel under the mantle of Elder Cleopas Ilie. The day after his ordination to the diaconate on August 14, 1987, he received his priestly ordination.

He was bestowed with the title of Bishop of Lugoj upon his ordination as Assistant Bishop to the Archdiocese of Timișoara on March 4, 1990. He was elected Archbishop of Iași and Metropolitan of Moldavia and Bukovina on June 7, 1990. The enthronement ceremony took place the following month.

The exceptional theological and pastoral perspectives of Patriarch Daniel were on full display throughout the Holy and Great Council of Crete. He advocated for the canonical standard of conciliarity to be upheld throughout the Orthodox Church.

In observance of the one-hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the Romanian Patriarchate, preparations are underway for the consecration of the mosaic painting from the National Cathedral and the canonization of several revered clergymen, confessors in Romania's communist prisons. Notable among these are Father Dumitru Stăniloae and Cleopas Ilie, two individuals who significantly influenced the life of His Beatitude Patriarch Daniel.
