Memorial service in Yekaterinburg for Romanov family at site of 1918 execution site

More than 60,000 worshipers gathered on Wednesday evening in the Russian city of Yekaterinburg for a memorial service for last Russian Czar Nicholas and the members of his family that were executed in the area in 1918.

Worshipers walked 21 kilometers along the route that the executioners used to transport the bodies of the Romanov family from the place of their execution – where an Orthodox Cathedral stands today.
