Culture minister tours Hania monuments, including St. Nicholas chapel within Venetian walls

Greek culture minister Lina Mendoni this week toured monuments and archaeological sites in the prefecture of Hania, on the large island of Crete.

Among others, Mendoni, a noted archaeologist and former ministry official, visited the Venetian Walls in Hania's harbor, as well as the remnants of the St. Nicholas chapel within the medieval fortress.

During a meeting, Hania Mayor Panagiotis Simandirakis expressed the municipality's satisfaction with the culture ministry's initiatives to push through necessary studies for the restoration the chapel.
