Iranian Christian convert in Iran released on bail

An Iranian Christian convert who was arrested during an anti-government protest in Tehran last month has been released on bail from a notorious women's prison.

The 21-year-old Christian convert, Fatemeh Mohammadi, who prefers to go by the name "Mary" since her spiritual conversion, was released on a $2,250 bail days before her court hearing Monday, the U.S.-based watchdog International Christian Concern reported.
