Peaceful rallies against contentious law allowing seizure of Church property again held in Montenegro

Thousands of people again held peaceful protests in cities around Montenegro to show their opposition to a controversial law that allows the state to confiscate religious institutions' assets and relics, which the Serbian Orthodox Church in the small Adriatic country has charged aims to directly harm Orthodoxy and the Church.

In the capital of Podgorica, thousands of people gathered outside Parliament, with the Metropolitan of Montenegro and the Littoral, His Eminence Amphilochios, leading the protest.
