Let us all unite in prayer

In the evening, in the first quarter of the hour after Ten, when nature slips into darkness' tranquility, it is at this point when we arouse and devote time to prayer towards God. Let us unite in prayer, with the comfort of knowing that God has not abandoned us; but mindful that we have distanced ourselves from Him.

We return to Him, who as the Loving Father opens His arms.

In these difficult times we face, under the threat of a pandemic, we yearn to again turn to God, to re-establish our relationship to the Source of Life.

We call upon the people of God to rally, spiritually, through common prayer, to become one body, one supplication, in common appeal, one for salvation from the Life-Giving Christ.
