Greek PM Mitsotakis: ‘Let Easter of love this year become Easter of responsibility and life’

Greek Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis on Thursday underlined that there was no greater salvation of the homeland than for the salvation of its citizens, in a televised address on the first 30 days of the coronavirus pandemic.

Mitsotakis again called on Greek citizens to follow public health guidelines and restrictions, saying the situation in Greece so far has been praised as a positive example.

He added “…Let the Easter of love this year become the Easter of responsibility and life. Let us remain safe at home.”
