Christian advocacy group warns of danger to Christians in Sub-Saharan countries also at-risk from Covid-19

According to the Open Doors World Watch Research unit, data indicates a direct correlation between countries in sub-Saharan Africa that are most vulnerable to the coronavirus and the countries where Christians face the most pressure for following their faith.

Specifically, four of the five most virus-vulnerable countries—the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Nigeria, Sudan and Cameroon—also count among the places in sub-Saharan Africa where life is hardest for Christians.
