Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem remains closed to worshippers

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem continues to be off-limits to worshippers, despite a previous announcement citing its reopening. According to media reports, the reopening of the holy cathedral was postponed, and no new date was given by the Jerusalem Patriarchate for its reopening to worshippers. The same reports claimed difficulty on the part of Church custodians to count the number of worshippers entering, as coronavirus-related restrictions limit the number of people assembled in a closed space.
