

Mandatory use of masks by pupils, educators at Greek schools due to pandemic

Greece's education ministry on Monday unveiled the framework of public health measures that will accompany the opening of schools in the country next month. Specifically, the use of masks by pupils and educators will be mandatory on school premises.

At the same time, the ministry has still not announced whether the customary start-of-the-academic year blessing ceremonies will be held at public schools.

At the tertiary level, university lectures with only a limited number of students will be offered.
