

15/09/2020

Greek govt extends coronavirus-related measures for places of worship until end of the month

The Greek government on Tuesday extended restrictive measures affecting places of worship in the country, in order to reduce exposure to the Covid-19 pandemic. The measures, such as social distancing indoors, a ceiling on the number of worshippers inside places of worship and those attending sacraments, as well as the use of masks, among others, were extended until the end of the month.