They added that both Mitsotakis and the Archbishop agreed on the need to contribute with all our strength to the implementation of the measures by observing the health rules as it happened from the start of the pandemic.

They also expressed the optimism that the observation of the health rules and the improvement of the epidemiological data will allow us to celebrate Christmas in a different environment. "it is in our hands to follow the measures and to celebrate Christmas with the Churches open" underlined Mitsotakis.
