

Strong quake in Croatia leaves 7 dead; Greece ready to send humanitarian aid

A strong earthquake that struck neighboring Croatia on Tuesday has damaged several Orthodox cathedrals and parish buildings in the Petrinja and Sisak districts.

Additionally, the cathedral of St. Spyridon was also severely damaged, while the body of a man was found in the collapsed church of St. Nicholas in the village of Zazina, according to an announcement by the Serbian Orthodox Church.

The quake, measuring 6.4 on the Richter scale, resulted in the death of at least seven people.

READ MORE: Earthquake damaged Serbian churches in Sisak and Petrinja

