Archbishop of Cyprus gets vaccinated, thanks scientists for inventing vaccine

On December 29, 2020, Archbishop of Cyprus Chrysostomos B' was vaccinated against COVID-19 at the Latsia Medical Center.

Speaking to journalists, the Archbishop thanked the scientists who invented the vaccine that will help people get antibodies to face COVID-19.

He also urged people to respect the measures that the government announced because, in the opposite case, as he said, there will be problems.

He also asked priests and people to protect themselves.
