

Serbian Orthodox hierarchs tour quake-ravaged district in Croatia

A trio of Serbian Orthodox hierarchs over the weekend toured the quake-ravaged Petrinja district in Croatia, which was hit by a devastating earthquake last week.

The hierarchs offered their support and consolation to the quake victims, while also meeting with local Orthodox priests to coordinate the distribution of mobile homes to families left homeless, while witnessing in person the damages sustained by churches and parish buildings.

