Holy Metropolis of Larissa hands out sweets to anti-vaccine protesters who demonstrated outside its offices

Dozens of anti-vaccination protesters demonstrated on Thursday outside the Holy Metropolis of Larissa, in Greece's central mainland, ostensibly in reaction to the Metropolis' decision to offer a cathedral's courtyard as a vaccination center against the Covid-19 virus.

Nevertheless, at the end of the protest, employees of the Metropolis handed out chocolate pastries to those assembled, so they would "…not leave embittered".
