Extensive feature on Holy Shroud

Scientists that participated in the closely watched “The Shroud of Turin Research Project” announced back in 1981 the first results from the years of research into the Shroud.

Those results caused an emotional outpouring among believers, but also generated a new round of debate into whether or not the cloth cover the dead body of Christ after removal from the Cross and during the burial.

An extensive report and answers to the questions surrounding the Holy Shroud are posted today on the Orthodoxia news agency’s webpages.
